March 2009

If we had no winter, the spring would not be so pleasant; if we did not sometimes taste of adversity, prosperity would not be so welcome. ~Anne Bradstreet

CASA Corner

Greetings Advocates,

A quick reminder to you all that case plans should be completed for each of your children. Your case supervisor has provided you with a template and will assist you in completing this. This working document helps identify the priority issues for each child that will change as the case progresses, meaning, some goals will be met, some approaches will change, some new issues will surface and become new priorities.

Please do not hesitate to let us know if you need any additional support in completing your case plan.

Thank you for all you do,
Michelle Arnold

Annual Conference

The National CASA Annual Conference provides a unique opportunity to join leading consultants, legal and social service professionals as well as representatives from the entire CASA/GAL network. Through education, training and networking opportunities, attendees discover new ideas and solutions to fortify us as we carry out our service to abused and neglected children.

Who should come to National CASA's multi-disciplinary conference? As one CASA volunteer recently said of people she has encountered in her work, "People who believe that kids count."

Tips for Advocates (from CASA's "The Connection" Newsletter)

1. Beware of assumptions. Leave your preconceived notions outside and pay attention to the strengths of the family.
2. There are myths about how various ethnic and socioeconomic groups tend to parent. Be aware of your cultural biases.
3. The fundamental belief governing child welfare policy is that the most desirable place for a child is with the family. Try to avoid thinking that you need to rescue the child from the family.
4. View foster care as a time of healing growth for both the child and the parent so they can come together and be a family again.
5. Don't automatically believe what you read about the case. Learn the facts and develop your own impressions. Go into the home and see what's really going on. Talk to Mom and Dad.
6. Find out who is part of the family's support system. Learn from them what might help the family reunite.
7. The longer a child is out of the home, the lower the chance that reunification will succeed. From day one, start finding ways to help strengthen the family.
8. There is a reason that National CASA standards limit the number of cases you can take at any given time (two unless an exception is justified and documented). Honor that limit so you have time to be there for the children and families you are working with.

Lifetime Television Debuts New Film about Foster Care

This morning Rosie O'Donnell was interviewed on Good Morning America. She was there to promote the movie "America" on Lifetime this Saturday evening. The movie is about foster care and the great number of teenagers aging out at 18 with nowhere to go. At the end of the interview, Rosie also called attention to CASA.....Yeah Rosie! She urged people to volunteer for CASA! You can go on line www.abcnews.go.com and see the short interview.

Synopsis: Dr. Maureen Brennan (O'Donnell), a psychiatrist at a youth treatment center, encounters her newest patient, a 16-year-old biracial boy named America. Through their sessions, Dr. Brennan helps America come to terms with his roller-coaster life, which began when he was taken by authorities from his crack-addicted mother and placed into foster care as an infant. Dr. Brennan works to help him open up about his painful past and discover the support and courage he needs to get his life back on track. This emotional story is based on the book America by E.R. Frank. (From <http://www.mylifetime.com/on-tv/movies/america>)
